Content transfer app instructions

I fought literally (not figuratively) for 3-4 hours today trying to sync my contacts from my old iPhone to the new iPhone I just got today and I was so frustrated that I thought only about the old-fashioned pen and paper method for transferring contacts, but on a whim I decided to try out the App Store and see if anyone had an app that could solve my problem. AT&T had an app, but it crashed so fast and often that I Googled it if it was a fake app made by trolls. It wasn't. Verizon wireless (which is not even my phone operator), however it made an excellent app for transferring content from one phone to another and in less time than it took to download apps on both phones I was able to sync phone contacts. So thank you Verizon engineers for making a simple, high-quality app that does the job! How to transfer content from your old phone to your new phone Switching to a new phone doesn't mean starting over. With the Content Transfer app, it's easy to transfer content you haven't already backed up to the cloud, from your old phone to your new phone. Any content you've already backed up to the cloud will also be available on your new phone after you sign back in to the cloud. Before you start, make sure that you backed up your old device and that you activated your new device. Once you've done this, connect your old phone to Wi-Fi and download the app to transfer content from Google Play™ or Apple® App StoreSM on both phones. We will cover a few differences that come depending on which devices you use, so just be in the poose for those related to you. Once you're in the content upload app, determine which phone is old and which is new. You may be transferring between Android™ devices, iPhones, or a combination of the two. All you have to do is let the app know what you have. Regardless of the combination of phones, the first step is to pair the phone. If you transfer between the same platforms, such as iPhone to iPhone or Android to Android, you'll see a screen on Pair phones. On your new phone, you'll see a QR code, and on your old phone you'll see a view. Set up the display finder over the QR code to scan the code. If for some reason this process doesn't work, simply tap Manual Setup. Then you should see that the name of your new phone appears on the old phone, after you tap the name, the invitation to connect will appear on your new phone. Tap Accept to pair your phone. If you're uploading content in a combination of Android and iPhone, your Android phone will create a Wi-Fi hotspot. To connect to this hotspot, scan the QR code on Android using your iPhone. On your iPhone, tap Wi-Fi Settings, and then select the hotspot created by Android. Wi-Fi password is automatically saved to the Clipboard, all you have to do is attach to the password field on your iPhone. Then double-tap the home button and select to return to the Content Upload app. Now, regardless of device devices using or the steps you followed, you select which content you want to upload. If you're on Android and you're uploading messages, your phone will ask if you want to change the default messaging app. Tap yes to keep your messages, and then follow the prompt to return when the upload is done. You can see how things are progressing right there on the screens. When it's over, you'll see a summary of everything that's been uploaded. One more thing after the transfer... If you're on an Android phone, you'll see a notification that your contacts and text messages are being saved. It's important not to dismiss this message. The message will disappear after the savings are complete. Congrats! You made a big move without breaking a sweat. And if you want a little extra peace of mind, return your content to Verizon Cloud so you can access it on all your cloud devices. Now all that's left to do is enjoy your new phone. Upload your photos, videos, and music, as well as contacts, call logs, and text messages from your old device to your new one. The contents can be airborne without the need for wires or accessories.
